Winter 2013

A Checklist of Things to Remember This Valentine's Day

- Be Spontaneous. You don't have to wait for a special occasion to give flowers. In fact, most women say "no reason" is the best reason to get flowers.
- Size Doesn't Matter. Trust us to help you send an arrangement that is appropriate for the occasion. Bouquets both big and small can make a bold statement. It's the sentiment that makes the impact.
- Score Big Points. Surprise her by sending a bouquet to her office, and see how much attention you'll get because of the attention she got.
- Relax. Flowers don't have to mean commitment. Women know when an arrangement simply means that you care.

The most important thing to remember is that you simply cannot go wrong with flowers. We're here to help, but you'll get all the credit!

Impatient With Impatiens?

Sat., March 2nd at 10 am

Ok, so you thought you overwatered them. Then you thought you underwatered them. Then you didn't know what to think! Last year's Impatien Blight took over Long Island before we could blink an eye. Beautiful beds looked untidy, thanks to an airborne disease known as Impatien Downy Mildew. Well, be rest assured, there are options this year. Great options, in fact, that will have your gardens blooming bright and beautiful for 2013. Join us for coffee and donuts as we share what we've learned from the research of Cornell Cooperative Extension. FREE OF CHARGE

Harness nature's power to create a healthy, beautiful home landscape

Landscape For Life shows you how to work with nature in your garden, no matter where you live. Conventional gardens often work against nature. They can damage the environment's ability to clean air and water, reduce flooding, combat climate change, and provide all the other natural benefits that support life on earth-including us. The good news is that even one home garden can begin to repair the web of life. It's possible to create a great-looking garden that's healthier for you, your family, your pets, and the environment-and that saves you time and money. Complete both classes and enjoy 10% off all your gardening purchases through April 2013.

Sympathy Flowers

Flowers are a thoughtful way to honor a beautiful life and help say what is often difficult to express during a funeral. They are always appropriate and in good taste. Flowers also play a functional role, adding warmth to the service and providing the visible emotional support that the family needs during this time.

Another option to sending flowers is a green or flowering planting such as our Garden of Seasonal Blooms (pictured below). These plantings are a living tribute to a loved one and can be taken home by the family. Some funeral homes will deliver plants or flowers to the home if specified or the funeral director will simply notify the family members that they may take the plants with them after the service.

The funeral service is over. Friends and family have paid their respects and gone home. There are no more hectic plans to distract the grieving family, and the shock has worn off. They are now left feeling lost and alone.

Experts say that although the initial outpouring of sympathy is a great comfort to a family that has lost a loved one, many people experiencing such a loss appreciate being thought of in the weeks and months after the funeral.

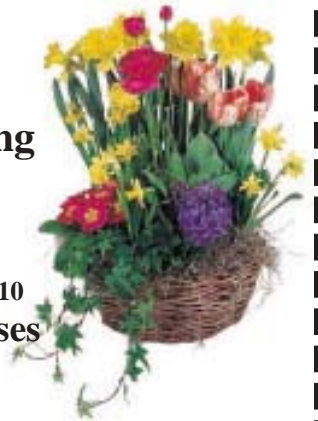

Consider sending flowers or a plant with a personal note to the home of the bereaved. Your message of, "I'm here if you need me," will show the bereaved that no matter how much time passes, he or she can count on your support.
